REGISTRATION IS CLOSING FOR GOLF!

Top level sponsorships are selling fast but there is still time for YOUR company to get noticed, and for your golfers to join in the fun, at the 5th annual Facility Manager Association of New Mexico Scholarship Golf Tournament on Friday morning, July 24th, 2015.

Hole-in-One sponsorships are still available and the pledges of door prizes are accumulating as excitement is building. The beautiful Isleta Eagle Championship Golf Course is the setting for the event again this year with range balls at 8 am and a 9 am tee time.

Although the registration cut-off date is quickly approaching, there is still time to put in a team of players or sponsor a hole on the course. Details are at www.fmanm.com where sign up and online payment is easy. We can process your credit card payment!

This event is the primary fundraiser event for scholarships benefiting students pursuing the mechanical trades at both the University of New Mexico and Central New Mexico Community College. Form your own complete foursome to compete in the “championship” format or register for the “individual” format where FMANM will pair you in an ABCD player format so all comers can enjoy the game. Everyone plays “best ball” and both tournaments will run simultaneously with a shotgun start at 9 am. Enjoy fast play! PLEASE REGISTER TODAY!

This is a fun, informational, networking event of the year for facility managers and their suppliers. Be there!

Last Call for Baseball: Only a Few Box Seat Tickets Remaining

Thursday night, June 18th, 2015, is the night to join your friends from the Facility Manager Association of New Mexico for an evening of baseball at “The Lab” as the Albuquerque Isotopes baseball team takes to the field against the Tacoma Rainiers. With only 35 seats available, make your reservation today, or be left out.

Your $40.00 admission fee for members ($45.00 for non-members) includes tickets to the game and a delicious, newly expanded gourmet ballpark buffet. Club seats and the open cash bar set the mood for the 7:05 pm first pitch, but plan to arrive at 6:00 pm to enjoy the food, friends, and ambiance. Ride the elevator at the third base line to the second level to join us in The Captain’s Corner.

Buy your tickets and pay with your credit card online at the website www.fmanm.com then contact Lori Gunnare at National Roofing (lori@natroof.com or call 505-980-2247) to pick up your tickets at 3408 Columbia Drive NE in Albuquerque BEFORE the event.

This is always a sell-out and replaces the monthly membership meeting. Invite your favorite facility manager for a great evening. Save your space today by going online to the Isotopes Baseball tab.

Running Out of Water? The Facts Explored in May

The San Juan-Chama Project is a U.S. Bureau of Reclamation interbasin water transfer project located in the states of New Mexico and Colorado in the United States. The project consists of a series of tunnels and diversions that take water from the drainage basin of the San Juan River – a tributary of the Colorado River – to supplement water resources in the Rio Grande watershed, according to Wikipedia. The project furnishes water for irrigation, municipalities (notably Albuquerque and Santa Fe), domestic and industrial needs, as well as for the preservation of fish and wildlife resources.

Randy Rust, an engineer with the Bureau, addressed members and guests of the Facility Manager Association of New Mexico with a historical perspective on the project and provided insight into the engineering aspects and challenges of the aging infrastructure. The project was initiated in 1951 and completed in 1976. “The San Juan Chama system includes three diversion dams—the Oso, Little Oso, and Blanco sites—which all feed the large holding reservoirs at Heron Lake and Nambe Falls. The water flows by the force of gravity. There are no pumps.” The greatest maintenance challenge is the concrete erosion affecting the three diversion dams, an alkali-silica reaction, eroding the infrastructural integrity of the diversion dams.

“The main structures were built between 1966 and 1971 and are holding up as expected, but needless to say, they are approaching the end of their useful life,” he commented, and detailed how the maintenance costs for the dams and reservoirs are on the increase. The current budget for the project is $2.3 million but last year exceeded $2.5 million.

The most surprising fact to most of the attendees was that the trans-mountain project diverts water from the western side of the Continental Divide and delivers it into tunnels on the eastern side of the Divide. Additionally, the project was designed to deliver 96,000 acre feet of water annually to recipients including the City of Albuquerque (roughly ½ of the water), the Middle Rio Grande Conservancy District (1/3 of the water), with the City of Santa Fe and the Jicarilla Reservation in northern New Mexico taking the largest share of the remaining water. Looking into the future, considering the ongoing drought conditions in New Mexico and Colorado, “Full allocation is unlikely for 2015-2016,” he said.
